

State Under Weather Alerts During Day

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—The U.S. Weather Bureau at Little Rock today issued the following severe weather warning:

Scattered severe thunderstorms with several tornadoes, large hail and locally damaging surface winds are expected to occur this afternoon and early evening from 2 p.m. to 7 p.m. east of a line from Stuttgart to Walnut Ridge.

The U.S. Weather Bureau climaxed a series of severe weather alerts today with a warning of the definite possibility of tornadoes in southeast Arkansas.

The warning spoke of "the possibility of a tornado or two within the next hour five miles either side of a line from Hamburg to five miles northwest of Lake Village."

It was issued about 11:20 a.m. The bureau said its earlier alerts, the first issued around 2 a.m. and the latest extending to 4 p.m., were merely forecasts and less serious than the warning.

The third alert—the warning—was the fourth—forecast possible tornadoes along with other turbulent weather in parts of Chicot, Desha, Lincoln, Drew, Union, Bradley and Ashley counties.

During approximately the first 10 hours of the period covered by the alerts, no severe weather had been reported.

Rain fell generally throughout the state overnight with the heaviest concentration in southwest Arkansas.

Sparkman reported 4.20 inches and Bluff City, 4.03 inches, for the largest readings.

No serious damage was reported.

Mountain Home to Sell Bonds

MOUNTAIN HOME, Ark. (AP)—Bids will be opened March 2 in Mountain Home for sale of $285,000 in bonds for construction of a Baxter County hospital.

The bond issue will provide the county's portion, 45 per cent, of the cost of the Baxter General hospital. The federal government will furnish $330,000 under the Hill-Burton program.

The hospital building committee has set April 24 as a tentative date for opening of bids for construction on the hospital.

Cold Sweeps to Northern Rockies

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
A cold wave swept into the northern Rockies Thursday, bringing stiff northerly winds, snow and near-blizzard conditions in some areas.

However, the storm was losing much of its punch as it moved southward. It was expected to move out of Wyoming today, leaving bitterly cold temperatures. The temperature dropped to 5 below at Casper, Wyo.

The Weather Bureau forecast strong winds with blowing, drifting snow for western Nebraska, eastern Wyoming and eastern Colorado for today.

The storm caused a pile-up of 13 cars and five semi-trailers on a slippery highway east of Hanna, Wyo., injuring nine persons, none critically.

Three to four inches of snow fell at Casper and five inches was reported in Rawlins. The winds caused considerable drifting and reduced visibility.

In Montana, the storm left drifting roads and near zero weather. "Wet" weather, in the form of rain or snow, covered broad sections in other parts of the nation while fog shrouded areas in the East from northern Virginia to southern New England.

Strong northerly winds carried snow from the blizzard belt into the central Plains while light snow fell in the northern Plains. More snow also hit areas in the Great Lakes region and the north Atlantic Coast states.

The fog in the East disrupted plane flights at major airports today and Thursday. At least 91 domestic flights, inbound and outbound, were canceled at New York's Idlewild Airport. Andrews Air Force Base in Maryland was closed and the National Airport in Washington canceled landings. Some flights were diverted to Richmond, Va.

Freezing drizzle slicked highways in parts of New England while rain dampened sections of Texas, the Lower Mississippi Valley, northern Mississippi, southern Tennessee and along the North Carolina coast northward into southern Pennsylvania. In the West, showers sprinkled areas of western parts of Washington and Oregon.

BERLIN (AP)—Robert F. Kennedy laid a wreath "to the victims of Communist tyranny" at the Red Wall dividing Berlin today and received some cautious waves from East Berliners beyond the barricade.

East Berliners could be seen peeking from behind curtains as the U.S. attorney general's motorcade drove up to the wall at Bernauerstrasse. Apartment houses along the East side there have been boarded up and evacuated. But houses lying a little back from the wall are still occupied and from several of their windows appeared hands, fluttering briefly before being quickly withdrawn.

Thousands of West Berliners had gathered on their side of the barricade to cheer the attorney general, some shouting "Away with the wall!" But the crowd fell silent as Kennedy laid a wreath on a wooden cross on the sidewalk commemorating an elderly woman who was killed when she jumped from her window to the West last August.

The ceremony took place a few hours after American troops rushed through the streets of West Berlin in a dramatic demonstration of Kennedy's pledge that the United States would defend West Berlin against Communist attack as it would New York or Chicago.

Kennedy was out early today for his second look at the Red wall he has denounced as a medieval instrument of torture.

West Berlin Mayor Willy Brandt pointed out features of the wall to the attorney general and his younger brother, Edward M., from an observation platform. No East German guards were in sight. But East German photographers were seen focusing their lenses on the Kennedy party.

Kennedy also visited the Ploetzensee prison memorial to Germans executed by the Nazis after the failure of the 1944 "general's" plot against Adolf Hitler.

Kennedy was taken to Berlin's "America House." It is a combined library, exhibition gallery and lecture hall where thousands of Communist-ruled East Berliners—in the day before the wall—used to come to read Western books and newspapers. He was joined there by Arthur Schlesinger Jr., special assistant to President Kennedy.

At this point Kennedy announced that he would walk to the crowning event of the morning's program—the presentation of an American bald eagle to the West Berlin zoo.

This took him almost half a mile across one of the busiest parts of town. He was joined by about 2,000 West Berliners, mostly teen-agers.

The result was a good-natured near-riot that jammed traffic around West Berlin's main railroad station.

About 20 policemen managed to form a ring around him and get him safely into the zoo's big eagle cage. The eagle named "Willy Brandt" for the mayor, made the trip in a small cage, carried by four of the Kennedy party.

There was a 15-minute ceremony at the zoo, in which the mayor, Kennedy and the zoo director participated.

Quick Hitting Corps to Be Enlarged

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Army announced today enlargement of its Strategic Corps and creation within it of two quick-strike forces, one mainly airborne and the other emphasizing armored might.

Five divisions are being added to the three already assigned. The reorganization does not involve any over-all Army manpower increase. But it does mean that about 75,000 more soldiers have been put into the "ready alert" force.

Actually it becomes a two-corps force. The additional corps will be made up, for the present, of two National Guard and three regular Army divisions.

The Army said the new organization will permit greater flexibility in dealing with multiple situations in widely separated areas.

It provides, the announcement said, for two mobile, hard-hitting corps, one essentially airborne and the other stronger in armor.

The 49th Armored and 32nd Infantry divisions, National Guard outfits mobilized last fall, later will be replaced by the regular Army 1st Armored and 5th Infantry when the latter divisions reach a state of readiness next summer. The two Guard divisions presumably will be released from active duty at that time.

Cuba Charge Ridiculed by the U. S.

BALBOA, Canal Zone (AP)—The U.S. Caribbean Command headquarters ridiculed Cuban charges that the United States is training invasion forces at jungle camps in the Canal Zone.

Havana radio charged Thursday that the United States was also preparing troops for a new invasion of Cuba at camps in Los Santos Province of Panama on the Pacific coast.

LL Gen. Andrew P. Omer, head of the Caribbean Command, said: "If anything like that is going on it has been carefully concealed from me. I know nothing of such an operation. I don't believe a word of it."

Other military sources claimed the Cuban charges were a propaganda move linked to current U.S. maneuvers by a battle group of the 82nd Airborne Division at Rio Hato in central Panama. The troops also are using facilities of a jungle warfare training center operated by the Caribbean Command in the Canal Zone.

Reaction Bitter to Algeria Plan

ALGIERS (AP)—Both French and Muslim officers reacted bitterly today to a government plan to demobilize 140,000 Algerian Muslims wearing the French uniform.

The government move was an obvious sign of its confidence that an Algerian cease-fire is imminent. But it posed a possible internal crisis in the French army in Algeria at a time when it faces a test by the right-wing European Secret Army Organization pledged to keep Algeria French.

The Algerian rebel national council, meanwhile, met in secret session in Tripoli, Libya, for the second day to consider the tentative accord with France for a cease-fire clearing the way for Algerian independence. France endorsed the accord Wednesday night.

President Charles de Gaulle's government Thursday announced plans for progressive demobilization of Muslims serving in the French army and said they will be given bonuses and pensions and offered the opportunity to re-enlist or resettle in France.

Americans Honor Astronaut With a Day of Parades

BY FRED S. HOFFMAN

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—President John F. Kennedy and astronaut John H. Glenn Jr., met here today and set off together on a tour of the place where the high adventure into space began last Tuesday.

They departed on the tour while an Air Force band played a rousing version of the Marine Corps Hymn.

To greet the President, Glenn had driven 18 miles from Patrick Air Force Base to this space center past the greatest crowd in the history of nearby Cocoa Beach, a cheering applauding crowd estimated by police at 100,000.

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—Astronaut John H. Glenn Jr. received a medal from President Kennedy today amid roaring acclaim for his fantastic space flight.

Returning to the jumping off point of his great adventure, Glenn got a long ovation from perhaps 100,000 persons who lined an 18-mile parade route from Patrick Air Force Base to Cape Canaveral.

It was at Patrick Air Force Base that Glenn was reunited with his family. While a happy, laughing and proud crowd looked on Glenn gave Mrs. Glenn a hug and a kiss and threw his arms around his two children.

Glenn embraced his daughter, Carolyn, 14, who was waiting at the base of the ramp with other members of the family. Then he quickly hugged his wife and kissed her, holding her tightly for a few seconds.

Then, emotion getting the better of him, he reached for his handkerchief and dabbed at his eyes. Next he turned to his son, David, 16, and spoke a few words to him.

Mrs. Glenn was wearing a red suit and hat with a veil. Carolyn, who says she prefers the nickname Lynn, was wearing a pale yellow suit and white kerchief.

Both Carolyn and Mrs. Glenn wore large white corsages. David sported a white carnation in his jacket.

Then Glenn 40, a Marine Corps lieutenant colonel, spoke with other relatives.

An Air Force honor guard snapped to attention and saluted as Glenn and Johnson walked to their cars. The crowd, now swelled to hundreds, cheered and clapped.

While standing with his family to pose for pictures, Glenn stepped back to say a few words to his parents. His mother remarked: "Quite a trip." Glenn answered: "Some trip. You can't just quite describe it."

Before entering the cars in the motorcade headed for the Cape Canaveral rocket base, Johnson stepped to a microphone.

"It's a great pleasure," Johnson said, "to welcome home a great pioneer of history."

After the big welcome-home celebration, the Marine lieutenant colonel was tickled to face newsmen who had a heavy list of questions to ask about his historic flight.

Russia Changes Again, Insists on Summit

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP)—A tough new message from Premier Khrushchev, insisting that President Kennedy agree to a March summit meeting, chilled U.S. hopes today for any kind of successful negotiations with the Soviet Union at the forthcoming Geneva conference.

The letter, delivered to the State Department Thursday, also raised grave suspicion among officials here that Khrushchev is trying to use the approaching disarmament conference as a device to prevent Kennedy from ordering a new series of atmospheric nuclear tests. Officials judged the 20-page message to be loaded with propaganda.

The State Department forwarded an English translation of the letter to the White House late Thursday afternoon, a little more than two hours after Kennedy left for Florida. Presumably, his special assistant, McGeorge Bundy, relayed it to the President immediately.

The United States planned to start immediate consultation with Britain and other Allies on a Kennedy reply to Khrushchev turning down his latest summit conference bid. But the State Department informally rejected Khrushchev's insistence on a statement Thursday night.

The statement said the U.S. government feels that its proposal to open disarmament talks with foreign ministers, with the possibility of a summit session later on, "is the proper one and the one best designed to lead to orderly progress in the disarmament negotiations."

This statement undoubtedly foreshadows the line of Kennedy's reply which is also expected to express hope once again that, as the statement said, "The Soviet Union will agree to the joint United States-Soviet Kingdom proposal for the foreign ministers meeting."

Khrushchev's letter was the latest in a series of exchanges involving him, Kennedy and British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan. Kennedy and Macmillan opened the series Feb. 7 with a call for a foreign ministers meeting. Khrushchev on Feb. 10 raised the bid to a summit conference.

His proposal was rejected by the two Western leaders Feb. 14 and his message Thursday was a reply to their rejection.

The letter from Khrushchev gave no indication whether he would go to Geneva even though Kennedy and Macmillan did not. But in the initial study of the letter here officials were less concerned with that aspect of the problem than with the change in tone which Khrushchev employed.

Informants said that the text, which still has not been made public, was filled with familiar Soviet propaganda arguments and was sharp and insistent, whereas Khrushchev's earlier responses had been relatively mild and cordial.

Join Hempstead's Soil Testing Program Take Samples to Station Nearest You

Soil test recommendations are no more accurate than the sample taken. You can take accurate samples by following these simple directions:

1. Select the different fields to be sampled separately.
2. Use a soil tube or a shovel. Take cores of soil to a depth of 5 to 7 inches. Discard surface organic matter and place the cores in a bucket or paper bag. Walk the field and take cores from about 20 places. Avoid sampling in old fertilizer bands or other abnormal spots.
3. Mix the cores in a bag or bucket. Remove one pint of the mixture for a laboratory sample.
4. Repeat the procedure for other fields.
5. Take the sample to a local pick-up station or to the county agent's office. Fill out an information sheet, giving a brief history and other information about each field. Pick-up stations are located in the county at the Agriculture Building in Blevins, Rufus Wolf store in Bingen, Thomas Grocery in Palmos, Hubert Kidd grocery in Spring Hill, Jewel Burke's store in DeAnn and Whitner Jones store in Ozan.

The sample will be processed and the results returned within two or three weeks. Since there is no charge for the service you cannot afford not to test.

Get the Top in Corn Yield

NITROGEN
PHOSPHATE

ORGANIC MATTER

Good corn production depends to a large extent on proper fertilization. The principal elements often most lacking in soils for proper plant growth are nitrogen, phosphorus, and potassium. Soil tests tell you what plant foods or soil conditioners (lime) may be needed.

If you are shooting for top corn yields in 1962, a soil test may be your "ace in the hole." You can increase your corn yields and profits if you use fertilizer wisely along with the right combination of proven practices.

County Agent Calvin Caldwell reviews some of these practices that are necessary for top yields:

First, plant corn on good, deep

Apply Lime Properly at Root Level

MX LIME IN THE ROOT AREA

It is important that lime be applied properly to obtain best results.

"Lime should be thoroughly mixed with the soil to be most effective in promoting plant growth and correcting acidity," says county agent Calvin Caldwell.

He stressed that lime should be well-mixed with the portion of the soil which contains most of the plant roots. Surface applications of lime without mixing with the soil is seldom recommended, except on permanent sod crops.

According to Mr. Caldwell, lime reacts slowly in the soil. Therefore the greatest crop response to liming is obtained when the lime is applied 6 to 12 months before planting the crop.

It is also necessary to spread lime evenly on the surface before you mix it with the soil. Skips or overlaps may result in spotted crop growth and yield losses.

For best results, apply lime correctly to your soil.

Keep Your Lime Spreader Working

Put your lime spreaders to work this fall, is the advice of County Agent Caldwell. You will get better legume stands next year and increased efficiency from the fertilizer you use.

Arkansas agronomists report that lime is a pillar in a strong fertility program. Liming acid soils makes more phosphate and nitrogen available for growing crops. In addition to these other benefits from liming, it furnishes calcium and sometimes magnesium for plant growth; helps make most plants more vigorous; and it favors the increase of beneficial soil bacteria.

Always have your soil tested before adding lime. It will take the guesswork out of the job and will show how much lime your soil needs.

Adding lime in the fall has these advantages, they say: It gives you more time for the job, a firmer footing for your machinery and a greater choice of fields to work in. Lime can be put on after soybean harvest, after corn is in the crib or on pastures.

Fall liming can benefit legume seedlings for winter cover crops.

Check Lime Needs for Soybeans

Are you getting high soybean yields on your farm? If not, why? Is it because your soil is acid and low in lime? Soybeans, like other legumes, like a sweet soil and plenty of lime.

Since soybeans are playing a more important role in Hempstead County agriculture, many of you have been giving more consideration to the needs of the crop. In some instances you have used fertilizer and obtained good increases in yields. Recent research by the Arkansas Agricultural Experiment Station indicates that an application of lime can do as much to boost yields as fertilizer.

Increases of five to ten bushels have been obtained from use of lime on soils testing strongly acid.

Farmers throughout the soybean growing region of Arkansas are reporting increases of five to 20 bushels of soybeans due to the proper use of lime. These increases, of course, are under various conditions and soils. In most cases the amount of lime used was on the basis of a soil test.

Lime not only neutralizes the soil acids but also supplies calcium. In recent years it has been determined that an adequate amount of calcium is important in obtaining high yields of plump soybeans. Calcium is also important in growing a healthy plant.

Where soil test moderate to strongly acid, except in the case of some of the newer river bottom clay soils, increased soybean yield can be expected due to the use of recommended lime. When lime is used on soils for soybean production, and even application should be made and worked thoroughly into the soil.

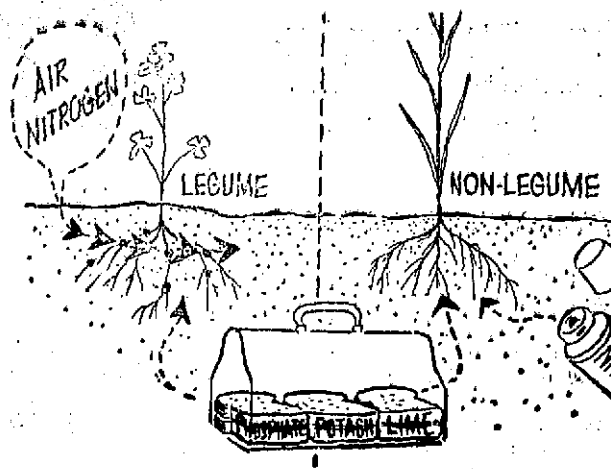

In summary, the use of recom-

Fertilizer Assures Balanced Plant Diet

Keeping a soil fertile, with a so-called "balanced" supply of each plant nutrient, might be compared to using a self-feeder for hogs or chickens.

Such a soil "self-feeder" would supply crops with the required fertilizer elements when they need them, just as self-feeders supply balanced rations to hogs and chickens at all times.

Top crop yields demand adequate and constant supplies of nitrogen, phosphate, potash and lime. But many crops in this county suffer each year from a shortage of one or more of these nutrients.

"Hidden hunger" in crops is costing farmers in this county thousands of dollars each year. Such crops are suffering from inadequate plant nutrients, but you can't detect the problem with your eyes.

Corn is a good example of how a crop can run out of available plant nutrients at any time, but not show the signs until it's too late. Take nitrogen, for instance. Corn can run out of nitrogen any time, but often the yellow tipped leaves don't appear until the flush of growth just about tasseling and earing time. Then it's too late to add nitrogen for top yields.

On certain plants it's also difficult to detect phosphate or potash hunger until it's too late to correct the problem.

Farmers need to "check up" on each field by having soil tests made. Following the recommendations will prevent hidden hunger that results in short yields.

Adequate fertilizer can make yields go up. And as yields go up the unit cost of producing a bushel, a bale, or a pound usually comes down. This is the road to greater farm efficiency.

Place Cotton Fertilizer Properly

Don't broadcast cotton fertilizer if you want best results. This is especially important for phosphate. Broadcasting dilutes the fertilizer and mixes it with a large amount of soil. This reduces its use by young plants and increases phosphate fixation or "tie up" in the soil.

A good method is to band fertilizer in old middles and rebeds. This places the plant food in easy reach of young cotton roots. It also reduces fixation in comparison with broadcasting. Banding in the row at planting time is effective if fertilizer is not placed too close to the seed. Potash and nitrogen can burn young seedlings if placed too close. The lighter the soil the greater the danger. For safely band the fertilizer at least three inches from the seed drill. Increase the distance with high rates of sandy soils.

By all means, apply all recommended phosphate and potash at or before planting. These plant foods are needed in the first few weeks of growth. Also apply all recommended nitrogen by planting time except on very open soils. This is usually a better practice than side-dressing.

If you side-dress, do it by the six leaf stage of the plants. Side-dressing later than this decreases the chance of complete use of mended rates of lime based on a soil test can give you extra bushels of soybeans at harvest time. In addition to this, the lime can be used for several years by other crops in your rotation.

There are nearly 14 million people living within a 300 mile radius of Little Rock.

the nitrogen when needed. It also increases the risk of the second growth in the fall following drought periods.

On soils with sandy subsoils applying all the nitrogen before planting can result in leaching losses. On such fields consider side dressing about one third of the recommended nitrogen.

Decision Can Be Very Easy

Before making fertilizer applications, it's vitally important to know the kinds and amounts of plant nutrients available in the soil and those needed by the individual crop, says Calvin Caldwell. Plants need a balanced nutrient supply for good growth and production. The important point to remember is that the kind and amount of plant nutrients needed by a crop should first be determined by a soil test. Then the fertilizer that contains these nutrients can be applied in the correct combinations and amounts.

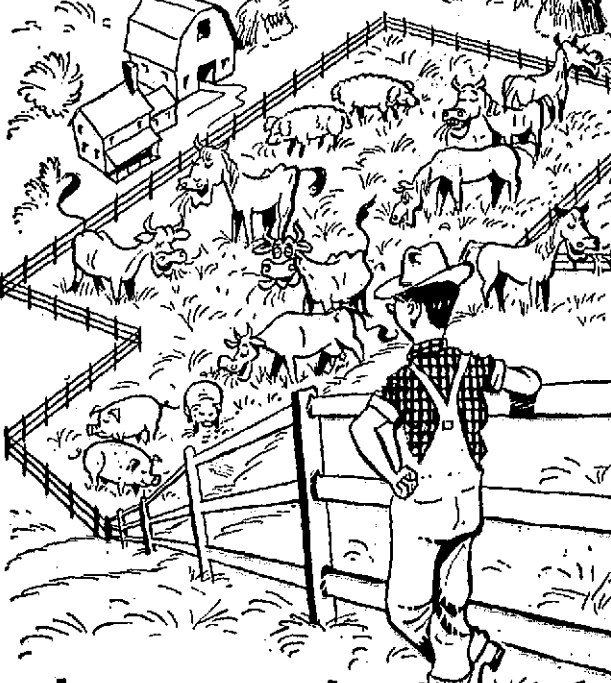

The primary nutrients are nitrogen, phosphate and potash. Soil tests conducted by the U of A Agricultural Experiment Station show that some Arkansas soils are short in one or two of these while others are low in all three. Commercial fertilizers supply this primary nutrient as well as some of the secondary nutrients — calcium, magnesium and sulfur. Some fertilizers contain only one or two of the primary nutrients whereas others contain all three. Some fertilizers contain different amounts of minor nutrients such as boron, zinc, copper, iron, man-ganese and molybdenum. There are no major soil areas in Hempstead County that are low in these minor nutrients. Occasionally boron is recommended for the production of alfalfa.

Some of the materials which contain only nitrogen are ammonium nitrate, ammonium sulfate, calcium cyanamide, nitrate of soda urea and anhydrous ammonia and nitrogen solutions. The three main phosphate materials available on Arkansas markets are superphosphate, concentrated superphosphate and ammonium phosphate. Muriate of potash is the main source of potash.

Mixed fertilizer are made by mixing various fertilizer materials. The mixtures are called fertilizer grades. A fertilizer ratio tells the amounts of nitrogen, potash and phosphate in proportion to each other in the fertilizer. The U of A recognizes a representative grade in each of the 10 ratios and uses these as soil test reports. The recommended amounts of nitrogen, phosphate and potash can also be supplied with fertilizer materials.

Don't Skimp on Fertilizer for Feeds

"Don't skimp on fertilizer use" is the advice of County Agent Calvin Caldwell. Soil fertility represents one of the best investments farmers can make today.

Fertilizer is a better buy today than it was in 1959. Since then, fertilizer prices in terms of plant food have risen only about two per cent. Yet prices farmers pay for other items have increased 146 per cent.

Farmers who try to save money by buying less fertilizer can reduce their income faster than they cut out-of-pocket costs," Mr. Caldwell says. In fact most farmers will find that one of the best ways to meet the present price-cost squeeze is to expand the use of fertilizer on their farms. As time goes on fertilizer will be considered more as an investment and less as a total expense to the farm business.

The use of fertilizer, however, does not automatically guarantee higher net returns. Soils should first be tested to determine the needs of each field. The use of high phosphate fertilizer on land already high in phosphate won't bring about much increase in yields. Such land, however, may need potash or nitrogen. If the soil is strongly acid, lime may be needed before fertilizer returns can be realized.

The county agent reports further that the crops you need most should have first claim for fertilizer.

Alfalfa Dies of Starvation in Winter

More alfalfa dies of starvation than is ever lost due to severely cold winters, reports County Agent Caldwell. He points out that winter-killing is due chiefly to weakened alfalfa stands "where the fertility level and the plant food supplies have run low."

Good nutrition can keep alfalfa stands producing at high profit levels over a period of several years, he says. That means adding heavy application of phosphate fertilizer at the time of seeding and top-dressing old established stands of alfalfa in the fall or spring. Soil tests will indicate how much phosphate and potash the soil needs to maintain money-making yields.

When you add years to the alfalfa stands life expectancy, you not only get greater returns per acre, but you get money-saving benefits as well. You cut down on land tilling costs and save on seed. You help eliminate the hazards of erosion in refilling fields for alfalfa seeding and you promote good conservation.

Summing up the advantages of giving alfalfa a full feed of nutrients, Mr. Caldwell says:

"The best argument I can present is the high rate of plant food removal by alfalfa. Four tons of alfalfa per acre — or two cuttings in a favorable year — removes about 180 pounds of potash and 40 pounds of phosphate. Unless some of this is replaced, alfalfa failure will result sooner or later.

Costly Feeds Doesn't Pay in Livestock

Fertilizing for low-cost feeds is the goal of successful livestock farmers in the county. Others are learning the hard way the importance of adequate fertilization to provide low-cost feeds. In general, feed makes up a high percentage of the total cost of producing milk and beef. Therefore, it stands to reason that a profitable animal agriculture requires efficient feed production.

Successful livestock farmers are those who grow most of their own feed such as hay, silage and pasture.

High quality feed production at low cost per unit requires substantial investment in fertilizers each year. The greatest return on fertilizer applications is adjusted to the fertilizer dollar comes from long range planning. Fertilizer feed needs.

The best way to determine the kind and amount of fertilizer to use for feed crops is by soil test. The returns from effective fertilizer use are prompt. And the benefits are carried over to succeeding years.

Also, remember the best economic returns from fertilizers are not possible on acid soils. Put enough lime on to do the job; a half job of liming means that fertilizers will be only partially effective. Both adequate fertilization and liming are absolutely essential for good quality forage at low cost per unit of feed.

Check your soils need for fertilizer and lime by having it tested. Successful livestock production depends on soils with good fertility.

Acre Costs Lowered by Fertilizer

High fertility that boosts crop yields and cuts costs per acre not only helps promote soil conservation but it gives farmers and their families a better living, reports County Agent Caldwell.

One of the requisites for building and maintaining soil fertility is good management and the regular application of needed plant food, he points out.

"High fertility is a soil saver," he continued. "It builds winter covers of small grain into leafier denser blankets against runoff. Pasture sods grow thicker with abundant topgrowth and healthy roots to protect the soil. Corn produces more stalks and stubble to add the materials for soil improving organic matter."

"But that isn't the entire story, however. Higher crop yields through good management and the use of fertilizer cut costs of production. They give farmers a big per return for every acre, every dollar and every hour they devote to growing crops."

"The extra income, in turn, helps farmers pay for comfort and conveniences they and their families desire. That can mean new cars, tractors and equipment, more plumbing and home improvements."

"And all these benefits spring from soil fertility."

Top Dressing Meadows Get Extra Hay

Farmers who top-dress meadows after the first cutting will get extra tons of hay later this season, reports Hempstead County Extension Agent.

"In addition to giving higher yields, fertilized hay is generally better quality with higher protein content," he says. This can mean important savings on feed costs for beef and dairy herds and more profit per animal per acre.

Another important dividend on top-dressing meadows is that the fertilizer nutrients help lengthen the life span of alfalfa and other legumes in the pasture stand. Thus you save time, money and labor by not having to reseed so often.

Soil scientists report that legume grass meadows use up large amounts of phosphate and potash. Four tons of alfalfa can take from the soil as much as 180 pounds of potash and 40 pounds of phosphate per acre.

These soil specialists advise testing the soil to find out how much of each nutrient the land needs, and to add fertilizer according to those needs.

experience in space.

Glenn's wife, Anna, his son David, 16, daughter Lynn, 14, and six other relatives arrived here Thursday night after riding down from Washington with Kennedy in the President's own luxurious jet. "It's like a dream," said the radiant Mrs. Glenn, summing up the reaction of the Glenn family to the attention that's been showered on them.

After a reunion at the Air Force base, Glenn and his family were scheduled to ride in a procession along a 20-mile route to the south gate of this missile test center from which Glenn blasted off three days ago.

Sharing in the glory were other members of the seven-man astronaut team.

The adjoining town of Cocoa Beach, which considers the astronauts its own, has been building up a head of enthusiasm—and its 6,124 inhabitants were primed to cut loose.

Police expected as many as 100,000 well-wishers to pour in from other parts of Florida and to line the motorcycle route.

Hawkers were selling pennants with Glenn's picture and oversized buttons bearing the legend: "Welcome back to earth."

Accompanied by Glenn, Kennedy was expected to see Pad 14 from which Glenn's Friendship 7 capsule was propelled into orbit and the Project Mercury ground control center, the heart of the man-in-space operation.

The brief tour ends at Hangar "S"—a sort of homecoming for Glenn because it was there he prepared for his space flight and it was from there he left to mount the Atlas rocket.

At Hangar "S" Kennedy arranged to confer the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Distinguished Service Medal on Glenn, who already holds the Distinguished Flying Cross and Air Medal for combat missions in World War II and Korea.

After the 20-minute ceremony at the hangar, Kennedy was due to take off for the rest of his weekend at Palm Beach where he, Mrs. Kennedy and their two small children are staying at the home of a friend.

The President's father also is at Palm Beach recuperating from a stroke he suffered before Christmas.

would New York or Chicago.

About 1,500 men of the 2nd Battle Group, 8th Infantry, tumbled from their bunks before dawn to take up battle positions in the American sector of the divided city. Grabbing weapons, the troops set up machine gun posts at crossroads and dug in anti-tank positions while infantry paroled the dark streets.

The U.S. Army said the two-hour practice alert, over before breakfast, was designed "to evaluate the unit's ability to react to various situations" and called it routine. But it was significantly timed with the U.S. attorney general's visit here and his assurance to West Berliners that "the full strength of American power" will protect their vital links with the West against Communist encroachment.

Kennedy and his wife, Ethel, received a tumultuous reception as they darted around West Berlin on the first day of their visit Thursday. In speech after speech,

Chapter 17

The great grandfather clock on the balcony was striking eight when Saunders, in shirt sleeves and apron, opened the front door for Will Turner, the next morning.

Will said good morning pleasantly, and explained his presence. Saunders looked pained. "This isn't your door," he said.

"No?" Will was surprised. "The back door, then?"

"No, the side door. Midgely should've given you a key. I got more to do than answer doors at this hour."

Midgely was already at work. He looked up from his ledger and then around at the clock, which now showed three minutes after eight. Will, tired of apologizing, explained about the key.

Midgely reached a long arm into a cabinet and tossed a key on Will's desk.

"Fenton's," he said, returning to his work. Will looked down at the dead man's key and wondered, for a moment, how it had been returned. He put it in his pocket and sat down at his desk.

The morning passed quickly, and Will was surprised when George Russell left for lunch.

Will and Midgely were served in the office by a disdainful footman who said his name was "Halbert." Having finished his meal and his employer's correspondence, all in complete silence, Will was very glad to see the friendly face of a pretty Irish maid who

Kennedy reaffirmed U.S. commitments to protect the Communist-encircled city and pledged the United States to the "peaceful but persistent purpose that Germans shall once again find themselves reunited."

Before a crowd of 100,000 at West Berlin's City Hall, Kennedy declared Berlin will not be attacked because "an armed attack on West Berlin is the same thing as an armed attack on Chicago, New York, London or Paris. You are our brothers and we will stand by you."

Police estimated a half million West Berliners turned out despite cold wintry weather to cheer the attorney general. Kennedy's younger brother, Edward, also on tour, flew here to see him but was almost overlooked by the huge crowds greeting the attorney general.

Speaking to an overflow audience at West Berlin's Free University he drew applause when he asserted that the trend in the United States is not conservative or reactionary, but toward social welfare.

"Far from being a workers' paradise," he said, "communism has become the most effective machine ever devised for the exploitation of the working classes."

The attorney general also alluded to Soviet attempts to preempt space in Berlin's vital air corridors to the West. "We have stood in the past—and we will stand in the future—for uncontrolled access to and from Berlin," Kennedy said. "We will permit no interference with this access, as we have recently demonstrated with regard to the air corridors."

Wants Meets for Alliance of Progress

WASHINGTON (AP)—A group of senators recommended today an immediate program of short-range, quick-impact projects to get the Alliance for Progress off the ground in Latin America.

The group also suggested stepped-up military assistance to countries of the area, but urged that it be limited to materials for international security operations, not usable to pose a threat to neighbors.

The senators, headed by Sen. Gale W. McGee, D-Wyo., made a 26-day study tour in Venezuela, Peru, Bolivia, Chile, Argentina, Paraguay, Brazil and British Guiana in November and December. Their recommendations were in a report to the Senate Appropriations, Interior, Agriculture and Armed Services committees, which they represented on the trip.

Sens. Clair Engle, D-Calif., Stephen M. Young, D-Ohio, and Frank Moss, D-Utah, joined McGee in the report, which said that everywhere they went there was "the deepest sense of urgency about getting on with" the Alliance for Progress program in which the Kennedy administration proposes big-scale aid for cooperative economic and social development.

They said four presidents and a number of other leaders warned that "time was running out."

The senators suggested quickened planning for Alliance for Progress projects in general, along with immediate institution of quick-impact projects such as water supply systems, vaccination programs, health centers, educational undertakings on a small scale including local-level, one-room schools, and community literacy programs.

Italy Government Against NATO

ROME (AP) — Premier-designate Amintore Fanfani notified President Giovanni Gronchi today he is ready to form a new government supported by the Socialist party, which opposes the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Fanfani told reporters, however, that the new government to be sworn in Thursday will stand firmly behind its commitments to NATO.

The premier resigned his four-party, middle-road government Feb. 2 after his Christian Democratic party voted to seek support in Parliament on domestic questions from Pietro Nenni's Socialists, who once formed a united front with the Communists.

Opposition to Increased Wages

FORREST CITY, Ark. (AP)—St. Francis County farmers voiced opposition here Tuesday night to pending federal legislation increasing wages paid to Mexican laborers.

About 50 farmers attended the Farm Bureau sponsored meeting to discuss the legislation. It would raise the minimum wage scale for the Mexicans from 50 cents to 70 cents.

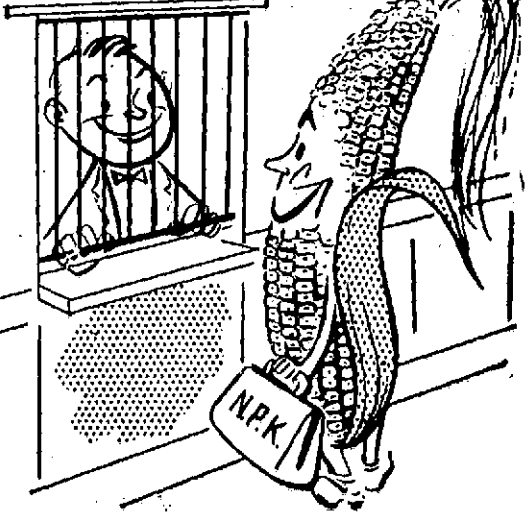

Louis Jones, St. Francis County farm Bureau president, said the increase would hurt not only farmers but the entire area.

They didn't get back to Russell House until a little after five and they found everything in an up

Porkers in Path of Texas A&M

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (AP) -Second-place Texas A&M tries to stay in the Southwest Conference basketball race tonight in a game with struggling Arkansas.

The Razorbacks are out of the contention but if they win two of their last three games they can finish with a 17-7 season mark. That would be Arkansas' best total in 20 years.

Arkansas is 5-6 in league play and must win two of its last three games to finish with a 500 record. A&M is 7-4 in league play, a half-game behind co-leaders SMU and Texas Tech.

Rice dropped A&M into second place Tuesday with a 63-62 setback, and the Aggies can't afford to lose again if they are to retain any title hopes. Arkansas beat the Aggies 64-59 earlier in the season.

Arkansas Razorbacks with its regular five—Tommy Boyer, Larry Wolford, Jerry Carlton, Jerry Rogers and Jim Wilson.

The Aggies will open with Carroll Broussard, Jerry Windham, Bennie Johnson, Benny Lenox or Tom Smith, and Ron Durbin or Jim Keller.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS Ken Saylor of Arkansas Tech is tied for fifth place nationally (this week in small college scoring, the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics said today.

Saylor has a 30.7 point average, compared to 33.6 for national leader Roger Strickland of Jacksonville, Fla. Herb Magee of Philadelphia also has 30.

James Allen of Arkansas AM&N ranks seventh nationally with a 29.6 average. Allen ranks eighth national free throw shooting percentage with 150 of 171 for .878 per cent.

Larry Fincher of Hendrix College, Conway, Ark., is ninth in that department with an .877 percentage.

Mother-In-Law Balks at Baby Sitting

by HELEN WORDEN ERSKINE

Dear Helen: My mother-in-law used to carry on like a maniac if we didn't divide the baby sitting with our little girl between the two grandmothers. But now Mama has moved away, my husband's mother won't baby sit at all.

It's developing into a problem because we can't afford to pay baby-sitter rates and would hesitate to leave our children (there are now two) with just anyone if we could.

My husband and I have considered going out separately, but we're very much in love and lost without each other. As a result I've not been away from the house except to market, and then I take the kids. Now a third is on the way and I'm beginning to look like death and destruction.

My husband suggested we take a trip to New York, see my mother and park the children with her while we have some fun for a change. When his mother found out that we were going, she actually landed in a hospital—couldn't breathe! Her carry-on upset my husband and her other children began wailing and crying. "Oh, Mama will die a purpose if you got her life in your hands." So we didn't go.

All she said to my husband was, "Your marriage must be cracking else you wouldn't be restless. Well, you were dying to get married and have made your bed, so lie in it." I'm still stuck at home with nobody to baby-sit. My mother-in-law says she wants to see the children but won't come here. Should I take the kids to see her?—Bitter Mother

Dear Bitter: This is the old story of a mother's unwillingness to let go of her son. If it weren't refusal to baby sit, or throw tantrums, it would be something else—anything to balk you. Not because you're you, but because you are real, a threat to her old way of life.

This is one of those rare instances when a turn of the other cheek might be the answer. By all means take the children to see their grandmother. They might even bring her a little gift. Since you're in the family and hope to stay, make it your business to win her over to your side.

Dear Helen: Being just a plain Jane, I've gone out with only six boys in my whole life, one of whom I married three months ago.

We're happy but I still think of another boy who was an understanding friend. We met at a rink where I took roller skating lessons. He was like a big brother with whom I could talk over my problems. A month before I married I said goodbye to him. It upset me. I cried. He is still in my thoughts.

Every time I go home I drop by the rink and when I see him my heart does a double-quick beat. My girl friend insists I fell for him and never recovered. Can that be true? Do I like him for romantic reasons or am I over-sentimental about losing a wonderful friend? I know I love my husband. Is it possible to love two men?—Upset

Dear Upset: It is possible to love two men but—not at the same time. If you value your marriage, put this other boy out of your heart and life. To love two men equally is to love neither.

Send your problem to Helen Worden Erskine. Be sure to enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope and address her care of this newspaper. Helpful leaflets available. Write for "Are You Sure It's Love?"
